FEATURED TRAINING PARTNERS

Academy of Advanced Manufacturing

The U.S. manufacturing sector is predicted to produce nearly 3.5 million jobs over the next decade. But with more than 20% of manufacturing workers set to retire by 2025 and new technology driving evolving skills requirements, more than 2 million of those jobs could go unfilled. ManpowerGroup and Rockwell Automation have partnered to create an innovative solution, The Academy of Advanced Manufacturing, in which we train military veterans for careers in high-demand technical roles. AAM is a 12-week, expense-free intensive program, designed specifically for veterans. AAM combines technical classroom training and hands-on lab experience with professional development and soft skills training necessary to become a highly trained Automation/Instrumentation/Controls Technician.

AAM was created to help you, and other Veterans, secure a meaningful career following service to our country in a High-Tech role within the Advanced Manufacturing and Automation field. AAM takes care of your expenses during the 12 weeks of certification training including lodging, food, computer, tools, software, hardware and transportation to and from the provided lodging to the training facility. Not only do we take care of your expenses for AAM during these 12 weeks, you will also be paid a modest salary for 40 -46 hours of training each week.
